evening in the forest

only man has made himself his god, only the god, man, can become old and die there are thousands of gods, some of which we know some of which we see only one time some of which are but names -- I am not old and I am not young, I know only the gods of growth and birth and death, they don't speak to us, they don't want our prayers, and sometimes I've heard them laugh and sometimes weep what do they care about man and his angry claims, they know but growth and birth and death why should we claim to be men -? - sometimes I hear my laughter answered, and sometimes my sorrow there are thousands of gods, some of which we know -
