nights

there are nights when I know much - when no stars venture to ascend the black walls of pride - when all the great cans are broken without a sound - when no timid heart can catch the tune from the gates of orgy - nights with no prices, nights void of fear -

there are nights when I know much - when the unseen rivers are felt creeping blackly beneath my feet, carrying silently the directions of the world's caravans - nights when no man, and no cry does mean much - there are nights when the rivers show new ways of life, only for the proud to use -
for bursting wombs
to blossom,
for dying hearts
to kill -,
silent nights -,
nights for great tribes to change their path for ever -, for weapons never heard-of
to be seized by sleeping fingers -, nights without speech - nights when strings, rarely touched, will disturb fate's sleep -, nights from which some men shall awake with new eyes and few words left in their heart -
