spring journey

- by night I left the world's house, wandered deep into myself, leaving each door unclosed - no stars were there, no sun, no moon, I fought through barren wildernesses with blindness lurking on each step, with corroding poison eating the sight of soul and body - I went still deeper -,
I groped through rocky darkness into utter void -
my eyes had died,
all sound had fled,
the soul shrank in dread, the last,
from nothingness -
- I staggered deeper -
and from beyond despair read with blinded eyes the tale of man's spring - carved in stone - fuller and truer - redeeming everything -
like a flower -
