Dear professor nazell,

Thank you very much for your kind letter from January 1961. My health has been improving in 1961, despite a smaller relapse in the summer which prevented me from attending any lectures at the Linguistic Congress of phonetics, but I took part in it and enjoyed being among people again and feeling almost normal, I was also glad to conclude from the lectures that no great revolutions had taken place in phonetics since I stopped reading - But I still invent new ways of getting relapses. The last one was tearing a radio-set down from a shelf on my head when lying in bed (here I tried to recover from knocking my head against a car), this happened in December, and I have been in bed for a rather long time, and have not been able to read, so I had to give up writing the textbook of German Phonetics which I had hoped to finish in January, before taking up my various studies again, now I have to start writing this book in the spring and cannot start my own work until the summer, I had hoped to finish my study on stops in the autumn, and then start travelling somewhat about again, in 1963

- But I still hope that I probably will not finish it before next summer: hope that some time I shall be able to come to London.

I had an invitation for the Linguistic Summer Institute in Beattie "Linguistics" this summer, but I have refused it and I am not going to the congress in Cambridge.

But I enjoy being at home too. I have bought a house with a garden, near the woods and lakes to the north of Copenhagen. I hope to see you there some time in the future. With best wishes for the New

Year

Yours

sincerely
